* C. N.—Cherokee Nation.

It can hardly be thought out of place, in a roster containing the names of so many men who have been celebrated in the history of our country, to give a short account of a flag now carefully preserved among those carried by the regiment since its organization in 1799. After the fall of the city of Mexico, the officers of the regiment desired to commemorate the active part taken by the regiment by presenting it with a new flag. The services of the nuns of the convent of the city were called into requisition and a most beautiful hand embroidered silk flag was secured. Although over forty years have passed since the flag came into the possession of the regiment, and time, and wear and tear have faded and left their marks, the old flag still shows the delicate work bestowed upon it. The following order, taken from the records of the regiment, was issued when the flag was received:

HEADQUARTERS BATTALION SIXTH INFANTRY, }
TUCABAYA, March 25, 1848. }

Orders No. 7.

In presenting our colors to the regiment, the commanding officer desired that it may not be looked upon as a mere idle ceremony, but as the eventful occasion of the deposit into our hands by our country a sacred trust, for the safety of which we, each and all of us, will ever be ready to yield our lives a glorious sacrifice. It is the emblem of our country's glory and of our own, and let us so strive to wear it and so to greet it that no shadow may obscure the bright lustre that has been shed upon our army by the brilliant victory of the valley, and that no stain may sully the honorable name which has been won for the regiment by the heroic sacrifice of so many of our brave comrades. The honorable marks which now distinguish our colors show how gallantly the regiment has done its duty. Let us simulate the heroism of those who have fallen, if the fortunes of war should again call us to the field, and the colors now presented to you bear among its stars the same record of the gallantry of its defenders.

By command of Captain Hoffman.

WINFIELD S. HANCOCK,
Second Lieutenant Sixth Infantry,
Battalion Adjutant.

Under a recent date, General S. B. Buckner wrote: " * * There was a feeling something akin to a protest on the part of some of the officers at replacing by a new flag the tattered standard which the regiment had borne through the battles in the valley, and which had received forty-five musket balls in the different conflicts, thirty-five of which were received at a point where the flag waved for more than half an hour within twenty-five yards of Casa Mata. * * Through all these years I have cherished the deepest love and veneration for a regiment whose fame has added so much to the glory of our country."

A glance at the records made by the regiment as shown by the engagements marked upon our colors should not fail to stimulate the young officers of the regiment to uphold the record of the past.

I desire to testify to the excellent and painstaking work and valuable assistance rendered by Sergeant-Major Charles H. Devereux, 6th Infantry, in the compilation of this register of officers of the 6th Infantry.
